Daylily Gardens

1955

N.Y.

Greetings to Our Daylily Friends

With this issue of our Daylily Catalog we enter our tenth year of business. It has been an exciting time for daylily development. It has seen the formation of the Hemerocallis Society; the setting-up of standards for judging and rating daylilies; the establishment of awards and honors for outstanding varieties; and last but certainly not least, it has been a period of intensive development and improvement of our favorite flower.

Our policy throughout this time has been to grow the newest and finest daylilies from all sources; then to select those of outstanding merit and offer them to our customers. Many we have listed in the past have been crowded out of our catalog by better newcomers; some have persisted and are still near the best in their color section. A study of our list will show that most of the winners of awards and honors are included. Many of our own introductions have achieved considerable fame.

To show our appreciation of the continued confidence our customers have had in our plants and service, we are this year offering, with every order, a gift plant. We suggest you mention colors and types you would like to have when you place your order.

Please note that we have returned to alphabetical listing of varieties. However on page 11 we give a listing of our favorites by color classes. If in doubt select from this list. We know you will find every variety entirely satisfactory. Please read 'Terms' at end of catalog before ordering.

Saxton Daylily Introductions for 1955

AFLUTTER. A lovely purple and yellow bi-color. The light purple petals stand up like wings, while the sepals recurve tightly. This large orchid-like flower has been greatly admired in our garden. Scape 38". Late midseason. Evergreen. $7.50

ISLAND SONG. A huge 6" to 7" star which opens flat. Creamy-ivory washed and streaked rose-pink; deeper at midpetal, fading to a cream edge. Sepals have less rose wash than petals. Scape 30". Mid-season. Semi-Evergreen and hardy. 15.00

KRISS KRINGLE. A pure, deep, velvety red with a greenish-yellow throat. A wonderfully clear vibrant color in a graceful star-shaped flower. Throat golden-yellow; green far down. 42" scape. Midseason to late. Dormant. 10.00

MAGIC MORN. (No. 50-60). Wide petaled shining rose-red self of fine growing habits and clear sparkling color. Larger and fuller in form than others of its class. Throat golden yellow. Scape 40". Midseason to Late. Semi-Evergreen. 7.50

MELORAY. An unusual pastel of melon-buff or creamy apricot with rose veins. A most novel and shining effect. Wide petals somewhat twisted. Scape 36". Late midseason. Semi-Evergreen. 6.00

PREMIUM. Very large, bright coppery-gold flower with cream midrib. Petals 2" wide, flower 6" to 7" in spread. All 1955 stock distributed to past customers.

You Can Easily Grow Beautiful Daylilies from Seed!

Daylilies are as easy to raise from seed as an annual. They will flower in two years. Our hand pollinated select seed from the finest new hybrids will give you flowers as fine as the new named varieties at high prices. There is no garden thrill as great as seeing your own new developments come into flower. Full directions.

A Select List of the Finest Daylilies

Awards and Honors

Each year the Hemerocallis Society gives awards and Popularity ratings to the best day-lilies. Highest Honor is the 'Stout Medal' awarded to one daylily each year; next the 'Award of Merit' (AM), and then 'Honorable Mention' (HM).

'Most Popular' Collection

The four top varieties on the 1954 Hemerocallis Society Popularity Poll:

1. Potentate. Purple
2. Caballero. Pink-Yellow bicolor
3. Naranja. Golden-Orange
4. Garnet Robe. Velvety red.

The above group lacks only 'pink' to make a rainbow daylily garden. We will include the top 'orchid-pink' SHOW GIRL, with the above four ($17.00 list value) for only $14.50 prepaid.

DAYLILIES

And How To Grow Them

By Ben Arthur Davis

This book gives the complete story on growing daylilies: their use as garden flowers, and their value in arrangements. For both the home gardener and the specialist. Included are five regional chapters by leading authorities. Mr. Saxton tells how to grow daylilies in the north-eastern United States.

How to Grow Better Daylilies

The daylily is one of the most easily grown perennials. It will flourish in most any kind of soil, in sun or part shade, and will adapt itself to a great variety of conditions. However it does have its preferences and if you want show flowers here are a few pointers.

Care of Newly Received Plants

If plants can be planted at once, unwrap the plant, remove moss or packing material from roots, wash them off or let stand in water for an hour to refresh the plant and set out. Daylilies may be kept fresh for several days if placed in a pail with water over the roots and stored in a cool, shady place out of doors. It is better to do this than to rush planting before soil is properly prepared.

Where to Plant

Daylilies face away from a background and toward the sun. Place them where they have a wall, fence, hill or shrubbery behind, and all the flowers will look toward you. Put the tallest plants at the back and the shorter ones in the foreground.

Space your daylilies 2' or 3' apart. They will produce their best bloom from two to five year old clumps, so allow space for the clumps to develop.

When to Plant

Plant late blooming sorts in spring, and early blooming varieties in summer or early fall. Daylilies can be moved almost any time, but bloom will not be as fine directly after the plant is moved. It must have time to make new roots and settle down in its new home. Plant evergreen sorts in spring if possible, or not later than early September in the north.

How to Prepare Soil

Daylilies like a friable garden soil made mellow with compost or well rotted manure. Bone meal or Vigoro are good in moderation but avoid too rich a fare, and especially no fresh manure. If the soil is heavy, work in some peat moss, ground sphagnum, leaf mold or sand. Daylilies like plenty of moisture during the flowering season. If your soil is too porous and dries out easily water it copiously during dry spells. However daylilies should not be grown in a boggy place. Spade up the soil at least a foot deep in preparing the bed and leave it finely pulverized.

How to Plant

Dig a hole about 10" deep and 10" across and pulverize the soil. Make a cone of soil in center of hole with point about 1" below surface. Place plant on this with roots extending down and out along sides of cone. Fill in with fine top soil and press down firmly working around roots if necessary. Before completely filling, soak each plant with water. Let drain away and then fill a little above soil level with moist rich dirt. Firm down. The crown where roots and stem meet should be 1" to 2" below the surface. Too deep planting reduces flowering.

When to Divide

When 5 or more years old a daylily clump will have exhausted the soil fertility and flowering will taper off. It is time to dig and divide. Dig the entire clump, wash off the roots, and with a sharp knife, cut into divisions of from 1 to 3 fans, each with a good portion of roots. Many times the clump will pull apart naturally and make symmetrical divisions without cutting. Trim roots to about 5" and tops to about 10". Prepare soil as directed above and replant as separate plants.

Insect Control

Few pests attack daylilies. If thrips are present they may appear on the soft new spring growth of daylilies. If stunting, distortion or falling of leaves begins, spray immediately with an insecticide containing 5% DDT, getting the spray right down into the growing crown of the plant. If several plants show thrip injury it is wise to spray the entire planting.

Yearly Care

In spring clean up all dead leaves and weeds. Sprinkle a small handful of vigoro around each plant and cultivate in. Compost and bone meal are also good fertilizers. We have found foliage feeding to be effective. Water during dry spells for finest bloom. Keep weeded during summer. In fall cut top growth back to about 8" and mulch lightly with a dry litter if recently planted. Cut off old flower stalks unless you want seed.
